Where has it gone?

NextG USB-Yagi TurboTenna plugged in but where was it?

It appeared that both the TurboTenna and the laptop's built-in wifi card were present, but only one of them was enabled to work at a time.

Windows 10, for example, chooses the computer's built-in wifi card by default.

Hence the wireless networks scan didn't go with the TurboTenna.

To switch to the TurboTenna, simply go to the Network settings and turn off the built-in wifi card.

Sorted, fingers crossed.
